

Only 3 and a half weeks before we go, so it's time for me to learn how to blog. This is my first attempt, aided by some great notes provided by my personal IT expert. We are all getting very excited now and it's feeling a lot more real for the kids. I got some videos of Scotland and Austria from the library this week, so we have been watching them. The kids can't get over how different it all looks and have already added more things to their "must-do" list.

I need to practice uploading a photo too, so will upload a work-in-progress photo of the kids' Lego competition entry.

